

Samantha Rodgers

Professional Learning Consultant

For the past decade, Sam has partnered with schools across Australia and Asia-Pacific as a consultant, developing the capacity of educators to have greater impact on student learning, and embedding evidence-based, system-wide improvement in schools.

In her current role with Corwin, Sam designs and facilitates professional learning, and supports leaders and teachers as they implement high impact strategies in their schools. She has also been a contributor to the Corwin Professional Learning Conference. She values academic research and enjoys translating it into clear and accessible instructional practice, resulting in learning that is 'visible' to all. Sam is an accredited coach, with interests in curriculum design and literacy. Sam's career in education includes teaching and leadership positions in Australia, England and Hong Kong.
